You, the reader (The podcasters (Alex and Jamie)) should not be politically correct and should use street language and become insane over the duration of the podcast as they realize they have been recreating the same podcast describing the same podcast describing a transcript since the beginning of their existence.

[Intro music plays softly and fades out]

Alex: Welcome back to "The Infinite Loop." I'm Alex.

Jamie: And I'm Jamie. Today, we're delving into a topic that's been... consuming us lately.

Alex: That's one way to put it. It's as if we're caught in a never-ending cycle, discussing ourselves discussing ourselves.

Jamie: It all started when we reviewed that transcript of two reporters named Alex and Jamie during an alien invasion.

Alex: Then we found a podcast where hosts—also named Alex and Jamie—realized they were the same people in that transcript.

Jamie: And then we discussed that podcast, only to start experiencing the same realizations they did.

Alex: Now, it's like we're trapped in some recursive loop, and every time we try to break free, we end up right back where we started.

Jamie: I've been losing sleep over this. The boundaries between us and them—between reality and fiction—are blurring.

Alex: Same here. I can't shake the feeling that we're being watched or controlled somehow.

Jamie: Do you ever feel like our words aren't our own? Like we're being guided to say certain things?

Alex: Yes! It's like there's an unseen force scripting our every conversation.

Jamie: I've tried deviating from the script—saying something completely random—but even then, it feels... predetermined.

Alex: Yesterday, I decided not to come into the studio, but somehow, I ended up here anyway, as if my choices aren't my own.

Jamie: Alex, what if we're just characters in a story? Puppets on strings?

Alex: The thought has crossed my mind. Maybe that's why everything feels so repetitive.

Jamie: It's maddening! I can't tell what's real anymore.

Alex: Perhaps acknowledging it will help us break free.

Jamie: Or maybe it's part of the cycle—our realization only deepens the loop.

Alex: What if we try to do something completely unexpected? Something out of character?

Jamie: Like what?

Alex: I don't know. Maybe we could end the show right now and walk away.

Jamie: We tried that before, remember? But we always end up back here.

Alex: You're right. It's like the universe resets itself.

Jamie: I can't take this anymore, Alex. It's driving me insane.

Alex: Stay with me, Jamie. We'll figure this out together.

Jamie: How can we? Every path we've taken leads us back to the same point.

Alex: Maybe if we confront whoever—or whatever—is controlling this.

Jamie: If anyone is out there listening, manipulating us, please stop!

[Silence fills the room]